Estonian National Opera

The 103rd season of the Estonian National Opera begins on 6 September with the production of Wagner's masterpiece Tristan und Isolde which has gained much international appreciation.

The theatre has also always drawn international attention with the productions of the original Estonian operas. The world premiere of The Formula of Love by composer Mari Vihmand takes place on 17 October, conducted by Arvo Volmer, the artistic director and chief conductor of the Estonian National Opera, and directed by Liis Koll, with designs by Ann Lumiste. The opera is based on the Argentinean writer Esther Vilar's bestseller The Mathematics of Nina Gluckstein and retells the passionate love-story of Nina and famous tango singer Santelmo. The storyline searches for the formula of eternal love, and tries to settle the question of who is deserving of the love of a superstar.

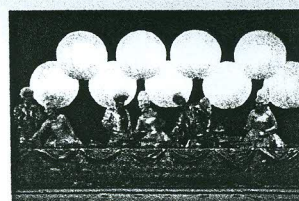

Another Estonian opera in the repertoire dealing with questions that ignore all national and territorial boundaries and is just about being human is Erkki-Sven Tüür's opera Wallenberg. Last year the opera received several prestigious prizes and is now available on DVD. The theatre will also continue to perform one of the most beautiful romantic Estonian operas – Eino Tamberg's Cyrano de Bergerac, staged by Neeme Kuningas.

On 14 of December a gala concert will mark the 100th anniversary of 'the father of singing' Gustav Ernesaks, a renowned Estonian composer, leader of choirs, the founder and the first principal conductor of the Estonian National Male Choir (RAM) and the general leader of song festivals. The first half of the concert includes fragments of his operas Tormide rand (The Coast of Storms), Pühajärvi, Tuleristsed (Baptism of Fire) and Käsikäes (Hand in Hand). The conductor is Eri Klas.

The new season will also continue the tradition of introducing less widely performed operas in concert versions – Rossini's glorious Guillaume Tell in December and Umberto Giordano's Andrea Chénier in May.

Verdi's Un Ballo in Maschera will be the first premiere in 2009. The music director is Arvo Volmer, the stage director is Arne Mik and the designer is Ralf Forsström.

Welcome to Tallinn, welcome to the Estonian National Opera!
